Business and Corporate Law

When starting any new business, meticulous planning is extremely important. Part of that planning should include what type of business entity will best suit your businesses' needs, whether it be a limited liability company, professional association, C corporation, S corporation, partnership, or sole proprietorship. Our firm and its experience will assist you in determining which entity is best suited for your personal needs. If you have also employed an accountant or tax planner to assist you, we will work with them to develop a global strategy, which will work to accomplish your overall financial goals.

If you are selling or purchasing an existing business, we can work with you to protect your interests in the transaction all the way through closing. Business transfer documents are extremely important, because they outline the entire agreement between the parties. The preparation of these documents requires working directly with your accountant, tax planner, and various governmental agencies to ensure a smooth and orderly transaction. We work closely with our business and corporate clients to guide them through the process and protect their financial interests.
